Occupation

The Man and Woman of the year are considered the top volunteers in Union County. Each year, two residents are selected for the honor, based on nominations by nonprofits, volunteer associates and friends.

The award is based strictly on volunteerism within the county, not what an individual does as part of his or her job. It also is not based on financial contributions, but instead on hands-on involvement that extends to the leadership level. Recipients have worked with multiple organizations for multiple years as an extended body of county support.

In essence, nominees have sacrificed their personal time and energy to benefit Union County.
